

AAHC SPOTLIGHT: Climate Initiatives

As of December 6, 2021

RESEARCH

King's College London (United Kingdom) is going beyond traditional research to find influences connecting climate and inequality, social medicine, mental health, indigenous knowledge, and inclusive policies.

<https://www.kcl.ac.uk/research/climate>

INNOVATION

National University of Singapore is partnering with Shell to jointly develop novel processes to use carbon dioxide, a byproduct of industrial processes, to produce fuel and chemicals for the energy industry.

<https://www.eurekalert.org/news-releases/770289>

RESEARCH

University of Philippines Manila is renovating buildings, including more efficient inverters, power-saving LEDs, and double piping for gray water usage.

Source: AAHC CEO Query Response

COLLABORATION

The University of New South Wales (Australia) is establishing the International Universities Climate Alliance to create new knowledge about climate, work with industry to develop new technology, build communities beyond academia, and educate the next generation of climate leaders.

<https://www.universitiesforclimate.org/how-are-universities-leading-the-way-on-climate-change/>